

4 Marsala-Colored Jewels to Covet

December 5, 2014
Source: JCK Online.com

This week, Pantone named its 2015 Color of the Year: Marsala. The wine-inspired hue isn't a vibrant red, nor is it rich in luscious pink hues. It's a watered-down—yet still pretty—rouge that can be found throughout jewelry in the form of pink sapphires, garnets, tourmalines, and more. Here are four ways to capture the color in gems.

Ginkgo band in sterling silver and 14k gold with 1.18 ct. tourmaline, $1,275; Babette Shennan

Earrings in 14k rose gold with 15.23 cts. t.w. rose quartz, 0.87 ct. t.w. garnet, and 0.5 ct. t.w. diamonds, $3,300; Estenza

Ring in 18k gold with 5.91 ct. rubellite tourmaline and 0.87 cts. t.w. diamonds, $6,030; Yael Designs

Earrings in 18k rose gold with 2.6 cts. t.w. rubellite tourmaline and 6.72 cts. t.w. diamonds, $15,700; Carla Amorim